MADELINE STUART

On heirloom quality

"I inherited an Edward Wormley for Dunbar sofa 30 years ago from my parents, who bought it when they were first married and living in the Village in New York City. It's a very simple tuxedo-style sofa. I've re-covered it three or four times, but it remains as timeless and elegant as ever. Anything so well designed and well made should last a lifetime."

ANGIE HRANOWSKY

On how to pick the right "sit"

"In a living room where you don't have a TV, you might choose a shallower seat with a taller back—they're better for conversation. But you want something deeper where you'll be watching TV. My mom loves to lie on sofas, yet I sit. So I always ask clients, 'Are you a loungeur or a sitter?'"
